Briana Ojeda Scholarship Essay

Qualities I look for in a person are what I saw in Briana. She was kind, friendly, caring, loving, compassionate, helpful, hopeful, funny, and pleasant to have around. She always knew the right things to say. She knew how to cheer someone up when they were sad, and would go out of her way for you. Briana was a very nice girl and will be remembered dearly. Ways I am trying to achieve some of these qualities are by being friendly, funny, and helpful.

One way I try to be friendly is by being polite when I meet a new person. For example, I can show them around, tell them my name, and ask their interests. Another way is if someone needs directions I can tell or show them. One more way to show friendliness is being nice to someone in your class that other kids may pick on.

One way I may try to be funny is just thinking of the good memories I've had with my friends and us telling funny or entertaining stories to each other. Telling a joke or saying something to make someone laugh is always a good way to make someone feel better. I always like to see someone happy.

There are a lot of ways I try to be helpful to others. Like if someone is hurt I can help them up or get them anything they need depending on the emergency. If someone is sickly and need medical attention I can help them with that. One more way I can be helpful toward someone is by helping someone with their work, tutoring them.

Knowing the right words to say is important too, because you don't want to say something at the wrong time. Another time you want to know the right words to say is when someone is feeling down. I may cheer them up by bringing up something funny.

Good qualities are important for me to learn and set a good example.
